

C. Ray Dahl Heads Crown Zellerbach Corporation

C. RAY DAHL

Charles Raymond Dahl was elected president and chief executive officer of Crown Zellerbach Corporation in March, 1970, succeeding the last Francis O. Boylon, who died suddenly in Boca Raton, Florida, on Feb. 17.

Dahl, 48, served as executive vice president from April, 1969, with general corporate responsibilities for manufacturing and timber operations and pulp and paper sales. He is director and member of the executive committee of the corporation.

The earliest period of Dahl's career with Crown Zellerbach was spent with the manufacturing side of the company. In more recent years, however, he has held posts which have broadly covered major operational areas, including marketing and production. From 1966 until his election as executive vice president of the board of directors of Crown Zellerbach Canada Limited in Vancouver, B.C.

Dahl has been with Crown Zellerbach 20 years, joining the company in 1950 as an industrial engineer in the Portland, Ore., general offices. Dahl was assistant resident manager in Camas from 1956 to 1959, moving to St. Francisville, La., in 1959 as resident manager of the St. Francisville mill.

During his years in Camas, Dahl (known as Ray) was active as president of the Camas-Washougal Junior Achievement program, which was started in 1958. His wife, Joyce, was active in the Camas Methodist Church where she taught Sunday School.

The Dahls and their three children live in San Francisco.
